Fund Commentary (updated quarterly)

The Rand has strengthened against other major currencies and inflation is coming down closer to the upper level of the SARB 4-6% target band. This relieves the pressure on the SARB to increase the interest rates in the short term.

There still seems to be a lot of uncertainty regarding U.S. President Trump's policies. This has meant people withdrew large amounts of money from emerging markets such as our own in favour for safe havens such as the American bond market.

That being said, Trump has continually mentioned his intentions to spend a lot of capital on America's aging infrastructure. This has led to great optimism in the commodities market. Base metal prices and their accompanying mining stocks have rallied considerably since Trump's victory over Hillary Clinton in November 2016.
